Case No.: 4:25-CV-04009-YGR

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANT TYLER TECHNOLOGIES,
INC.'S MOTION TO DISMISS

Re: Dkt. No. 19

9 Pending before the Court is defendant Tyler Technologies, Inc.'s ("Tyler") motion to 10 dismiss plaintiffs James Chowning and Adam Fitzgerald's first amended class action complaint
11 ("FACAC"). (Dkt. No. 19, Defendant's Motion to Dismiss First Amended Class Action Complaint 12 ["Mot."].) Having carefully considered the papers submitted and the pleadings in this action, and 13 for the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART Tyler's motion to 14 dismiss.<sup>1</sup>

15 I. BACKGROUND

16 A. FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

17 The FACAC provides as follows:

18 In December 2023, the California Department of Parks and Recreation ("DPR") awarded 19 Tyler a 10-year contract to design and operate ReserveCalifornia.com ("Reserve California"), a 20 website that enables online booking for campsites located in California State Parks. (FACAC ¶ 2.)
21 Reserve California charges campers a campsite fee and a $8.25 reservation fee. (Id.) In exchange
22 for Tyler's services, DPR "agreed to compensate [Tyler with] the eligible reservation-based 23 transaction fees." (Id. ¶ 67.) The contract requires DPR to approve any service and reservation fee
24 that Tyler charges (id., Ex. A at 25) and requires Tyler to comply with federal and California laws
25 and regulations in designing, operating, and otherwise performing any services related to Reserve
26 California. (Id. ¶ 66.) Tyler began operating Reserve California in August 2024. (Id. ¶ 2.)27

<sup>1</sup> Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 78(b) and Civil Local Rule 7-1(b), the Court finds this motion appropriate for decision without oral argument.

1 Plaintiffs complain that the $8.25 reservation fee that Tyler charges is not included in “the 2 initial price displayed to consumers” and is not disclosed “until the final check-out screens.” (Id.
 3 ¶ 5.) In October 2024, plaintiff James Chowning made a same-day reservation through Reserve
 4 California for a campsite at San Onofre State Beach. (Id. ¶ 87.) After identifying the park and 5 selecting the correct date and location, Chowning reviewed a list of available sites, which initially
 6 displayed the reservation price as “starting at $45.00.” (Id. ¶¶ 92–93.)

16 Once Chowning selected a campsite at Bluff Camp, the website again displayed that the campsite’s
 17 price was $45. (Id. ¶ 94.)

1 Chowning next clicked “Book Now” and was taken to the website’s checkout page, (id. ¶¶ 95–96),
 2 where the $8.25 reservation fee was first mentioned.<sup>2</sup> (Id. ¶ 96.)

The screenshot shows a booking form with the following details:

Customer will forfeit their $8.25 reservation fee, $8.25 cancellation fee, and first night use fee. 12 On the next checkout page, Chowning alleges the true price of the campsite—$53.25—was finally 13 displayed (id. ¶ 98):

- Sub Total: $53.25
- Sales Tax: $0.00
- Grand Total: $53.25

25 <sup>2</sup> Plaintiffs allege, through illustrative screenshots from Reserve California, that the $8.25
 26 reservation fee was not disclosed until plaintiffs reached the first of the several checkout pages. (Id.
 27 ¶¶ 96, 115.) Defendant disputes that fact and argues that its website—which it requests the Court
 28 judicially notice—discloses the reservation fee under the “Show More” link related to unit details, amenities, and other remarks regarding the selected campsite. (Mot. at 6.) A website is not judicially noticeable, nor does the Court resolve factual disputes on a motion to dismiss. The Court therefore DENIES Tyler’s request for judicial notice.

1 Plaintiff Adam Fitzgerald's experience reserving a campsite through Reserve California at 2 the Crystal Cove State Park Moro Campground was substantially similar to plaintiff Chowning's.
3 (Id. ¶¶ 102–18.)

4 On behalf of a putative class, plaintiffs now bring this action against Tyler, alleging that
5 Tyler violated the: (1) Consumers Legal Remedies Act (“CLRA”), Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1770 et seq.;
6 (2) Unfair Competition Law (“UCL”), Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 et seq.; (3) False
7 Advertising Law (“FAL”), Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500 et seq.; and (4) unjust enrichment.

8 B. THE HONEST PRICING ACT

9 By way of background, plaintiffs' theory of the case flows from the Honest Pricing Act,
10 which the California Legislature enacted in October 2023. (Id. ¶ 8.) The Act prevents certain 11 deceptive advertising tactics, like “drip pricing,” where a firm advertises the product's base price
12 and later reveals other mandatory fees. (Id. ¶ 52.) Those fees are also sometimes referred to as 13 “junk” fees. (Id. ¶¶ 6–7.) The Honest Pricing Act added the following provision to the CLRA:

14 (a) The unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or 15 practices listed in this subdivision undertaken by any person in a transaction 16 intended to result or that results in the sale or lease of goods or services to any consumer are unlawful:

17 . . .

18 (29) (A) advertising, displaying, or offering a price for a good or service 19 that does not include all mandatory fees or charges other than either of the following:

20 (i) Taxes or fees imposed by a government on the transaction.
21 (ii) Postage or carriage charges that will be reasonably and actually incurred to ship the physical good to the consumer. . . .

22 Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a)(29)(A).

23 II. LEGAL STANDARD

24 A court may dismiss a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) for failing to state a claim upon which 25 relief can be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a complaint must 26 plead “sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its 27 face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (citing Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S.
28 544, 570 (2007)). A claim is facially plausible when a plaintiff pleads “factual content that allows

1 the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.”
2 Id. In reviewing the plausibility of a complaint, courts “construe the pleadings in the light most 3 favorable to the nonmoving party.” Manzarek v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 519 F.3d 1025,
4 1031 (9th Cir. 2008). Courts must consider the complaint “in its entirety” and may also consider 5 “documents incorporated into the complaint by reference[] and matters of which a court may take 6 judicial notice.” Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 322 (2007). Finally,
7 “[d]ismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is appropriate only where the complaint lacks a cognizable legal 8 theory or sufficient facts to support a cognizable legal theory.” Mendiondo v. Centinela Hosp. Med.
9 Ctr., 521 F.3d 1097, 1104 (9th Cir. 2008).

10 Because plaintiffs’ CLRA, UCL, and FAL claims are based on misleading advertising, they 11 “sound in fraud” and must meet Rule 9(b)’s heightened pleading standard. See Watkins v. MGA
12 Ent. Inc., 550 F.Supp.3d 815, 833 (N.D. Cal. 2021); Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); (FACAC ¶¶ 135–38).
13 Under Rule 9(b), a plaintiff must “state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or 14 mistake.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). However, “[m]alice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a 15 person’s mind may be alleged generally.” Id.

16 III. ANALYSIS

17 Tyler moves to dismiss plaintiffs’ amended complaint in its entirety, arguing that: (1)
18 plaintiffs lack standing to advance their CLRA, UCL, and FAL claims; (2) plaintiffs fail to allege 19 the elements of a CLRA claim; (3) its conduct is protected by a safe harbor which excludes taxes or 20 fees imposed by a government on the transaction; and (4) plaintiffs fail to state a claim for unjust
21 enrichment. The Court addresses each argument in turn.

22 A. STANDING

23 Tyler argues that plaintiffs lack standing because plaintiffs cannot show causation or harm.

24 1. Causation

25 Tyler argues that plaintiffs do not properly allege causation because plaintiffs do not plead
26 that they relied on Tyler’s supposed misrepresentation or omission. Rather, plaintiffs allege that 27 they reviewed the mandatory reservation fee, which was revealed during the checkout process, and 28 continued to reserve the campsite.

1       Under the CLRA, a consumer who “suffers any damage as a result of [any practice declared
 2 unlawful under this section]” can bring a claim. Cal. Civ. Code § 1780(a). The UCL and FAL too
 3 have similar causation requirements. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17204, 17505.2(e). To establish
 4 causation under the CLRA, UCL, and FAL, plaintiffs must allege that they relied on defendant’s
 5 alleged misrepresentation. Harvey v. World Market, LLC, 2025 WL 1359066, at *3 (N.D. Cal. May 6 9, 2025) (citing Daniel v. Ford Motor Co., 806 F.3d 1217, 1225 (9th Cir. 2015) (CLRA and UCL));
 7 see also Moore v. Mars Petcare US, Inc., 966 F.3d 1007, 1020 (9th Cir. 2020) (UCL and FAL)). At 8 the pleading stage, courts may infer reliance, however, if the misrepresentation is “material.”
 9 Daniel, 806 F.3d at 1225; Moore, 966 F.3d at 1021. A representation is “material” if “a reasonable 10 consumer would attach importance to it.” Hinojos v. Kohl’s Corp., 718 F.3d 1098, 1107 (9th Cir.
 11 2013).<sup>3</sup> “Moreover, the legislature’s decision to prohibit a particular misleading advertising practice
 12 is evidence that the legislature has deemed that the practice constitutes a ‘material’
 13 misrepresentation, and courts must defer to that determination.” Id.; see also Mansfield v. StockX
 14 LLC, 2025 WL 2811791, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 3, 2025).

15       Here, plaintiffs allege that by “[r]elying on quoted price, [plaintiffs] continued with the 16 transaction” and that “had [plaintiffs] known the true nature of the Junk Fee . . . [they] would have 17 attempted to pay in person directly to [the California state park].” (Id. ¶¶ 89, 95.) These allegations 18 are sufficient to allege materiality, and thus, under Hinojos, supra, the allegations suffice for the 19 elements of reliance and causation.

20       In a variation of the above, a court in this district recently addressed the same issue in 21 Harvey, 2025 WL 1359066, at *4. There, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant, World Market, 22 violated the CLRA in not disclosing oversized item surcharges and shipping and handling fees for 23 furniture. Id. World Market raised the same reliance argument that Tyler raises here, claiming that 24 the plaintiff could not allege reliance because she proceeded with her furniture purchase after 25 World Market disclosed the mandatory fees. Id. The court concluded that “[a]t this early stage of

---

26
 27       <sup>3</sup> Tyler’s attempts to distinguish Hinojos by arguing that it presents a materially different 28 set of facts from the present case do not persuade. (Dkt. No. 30, Defendant’s Reply [“Reply”] at 13.) In short, Hinojos’ legal principles apply in this action. The difference in the factual background is irrelevant and does not compel a different result.

1 litigation, it would be inappropriate for the Court to hypothesize about the availability of 2 alternatives or other factual circumstances surrounding the transaction.” Id. The Harvey court also 3 emphasized the “catch-22” that World Market there, and Tyler here, advances: any consumer
4 seeking to enforce the new CLRA provision could either purchase the product (despite the fee
5 disclosure, which, according to defendant would strip a plaintiff of standing due to a lack of 6 causation) or decline the purchase (meaning the plaintiff was not damaged, and therefore did not 7 have standing). Id. Neither choice provides a plaintiff standing to sue. “Surely the Legislature did 8 not pass a law with no practical effect—especially given the overarching purpose of the CLRA.” Id.
9 The Court agrees with the logic.

10 2. Damages

11 Tyler next argues that plaintiffs were not harmed because they knowingly paid the 12 reservation fee when reserving the campsite and received the benefit of the bargain—a campsite in 13 accordance with the final fee.

14 The CLRA, UCL, and FAL each require that plaintiffs allege that they were harmed
15 because of the defendant’s conduct. Hinojos, 718 F.3d at 1104, 1107. A plaintiff is injured when 16 they pay for an unlawful fee in the context of drip pricing. See Harvey, 2025 WL 1359066, at *6;
17 Mansfield, 2025 WL 2811791, at *4 (“But whether [plaintiff] knew about the fee prior to purchase
18 has no bearing on whether paying the fee constituted an injury. Under [plaintiff’s] allegations, 19 [defendant] was not entitled to collect the fee in the first place without disclosing it up front. As 20 such, [defendant] inflicted an injury when it charged, and [plaintiff] paid, the allegedly unlawful 21 fee.”).

22 Plaintiffs allege that had they known the fee “was paid to Tyler Technologies, and not Cal
23 Parks, [they] would not have made the reservation through Reserve California and instead would 24 have attempted to pay directly in person to Cal Parks.” (FACAC ¶¶ 89, 105.) Those allegations are 25 sufficient at this juncture. While the Court agrees that Tyler is not required to disclose to whom the 26 reservation fee is paid, Tyler’s argument does not address its alleged failure to disclose the 27 complete price, including the reservation fee, in the first instance. For the same reason, plaintiffs 28 have satisfied the damages requirement under the UCL and the FAL.

1           Accordingly, the Court finds that plaintiffs have established standing to bring their claims
2 under the CLRA, the UCL, and the FAL.

3           B. THE CLRA CLAIM

4           Tyler next argues that plaintiffs fail to state a CLRA claim for two reasons: (1) campsite
5 reservations are neither “goods” nor “services” for purposes of the statute; and (2) the reservation
6 fee is exempt from Section 1770(a)(29) because it is a tax or fee that the government imposes.

7           1. “Goods” and “Services” Requirement of the CLRA

8           The CLRA applies to only transactions involving “the sale or lease of goods or services.”
9 Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a). The CLRA defines “goods” and “services” as follows:

10           (a) “Goods” means tangible chattels bought or leased for use primarily 11           for personal, family, or household purposes, including certificates 12           or coupons exchangeable for these goods, and including goods that,
13           at the time of the sale or subsequently, are to be so affixed to real 14           property as to become a part of real property, whether or not they 15           are severable from the real property.

16           (b) “Services” means work, labor, and services for other than a 17           commercial or business use, including services furnished in 18           connection with the sale or repair of goods.

19           Cal. Civ. Code § 1761(a), (b). In evaluating whether the challenged conduct is a good or service, a 20           court must follow the statutory requirement that the CLRA shall be “liberally construed and applied
21           to promote its underlying purposes, which are to protect consumers against unfair and deceptive
22           business practices and to provide efficient and economical procedures to secure such protection.”
23           Id. § 1760.

24           The Court finds that a campsite reservation is not a “tangible chattel” and thus cannot be 25           considered a “good” under the statute. Several courts, however, have found that these sorts of 26           reservations can be considered a “service” for purposes of the CLRA. For example, the Harvey
27           court found that the Honest Pricing Act was “designed to prohibit drip pricing in all industries,”
28           which, as the California Legislature explained, includes “short-term rentals, [and] hotels.” Harvey, 2025 WL 1359066, at *4 n.2 (citing SB 478 FAQ at 1); see also Hall v. Marriott Int’l, Inc., 2020 WL 4727069, at *13 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 14, 2020) (holding that a hotel reservation could be considered a service under the CLRA).

1       Defendant analogizes to a host of cases that do not persuade. Those cases involve items that
2 are markedly different from campsite reservations. See Hall v. Sea World Entertainment Inc., 2015
3 WL 9659911 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 23, 2015) (holding that tickets for entrance to an amusement park 4 were not goods or services where the lawsuit was filed to challenge defendant's alleged 5 misrepresentation about the treatment of whales); Olson v. Major League Baseball, 447 F.Supp.3d
6 159 (S.D.N.Y. 2020), aff'd, 29 F.4th 59 (2d Cir. 2022) (did not address this issue); Woulfe v.
7 Universal City Studios LLC, 2022 WL 18216089 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2022) (limited-time license to 8 stream a film); Lazebnik v. Apple, Inc., 2014 WL 4275008 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2014) (season pass
9 for a TV show on iTunes). Two cases relate to "timeshare points." See Wixon v. Wyndham Resort
10 Development Corp., 2008 WL 1777590 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 18, 2008); Kissling v. Wyndham Vacation
11 Resorts, Inc., 2015 WL 7283038 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 18, 2015). In those two cases, however, the 12 plaintiffs were guaranteed "corporate ownership" of a timeshare, which the court determined was 13 for commercial, not personal, use. Wixon, 2008 WL 1777590, at *4; Kissling, 2015 WL 7283038,
14 at *4; see also Cal. Civ. Code § 1761(b) (excluding services for a "commercial or business use.")
15 That is not the case here.

16       The Court finds that the reservation fee for a campsite is a "service" for a visitor's personal 17 use, akin to a hotel reservation, and thus finds that it is subject to the CLRA.

18           2.       Section 1770(a)(29)(A) of the CLRA

19       Tyler next argues that its $8.25 mandatory reservation fee is exempted from the CLRA 20 because it qualifies as a "[t]ax[] or fee[] imposed by a government on the transaction" under 21 Section 1770(a)(29)(A)(i). Plaintiffs disagree.

22       As explained above, the Honest Pricing Act applies to all "advertising, displaying, or 23 offering a price for a good or service that does not include all mandatory fees or charges." Cal. Civ.
24 Code § 1770(a)(29)(A). The statute carves out two exceptions for: (i) "[t]axes or fees imposed by a 25 government on the transaction," and (ii) postage or carriage charges. Section 1770(a)(29)(A)(i)-(ii).
26 Tyler argues that its reservation fee satisfies the first exception.

27       Cases interpreting Section 1770(a)(29)(A)(i) have limited its reach to government-imposed
28 taxes. See Harvey, 2025 WL 1359066, at *1 (explaining that the newest CLRA provision prohibits

1 ““[a]dvertising, displaying, or offering a price for a good or service that does not include all
2 mandatory fees or charges’ other than taxes or actually incurred shipping costs”” (citation omitted);
3 Mansfield, 2025 WL 2811791, at *4 (noting that the CLRA, with the new amendment, now directly
4 prohibits drip pricing unless the later added mandatory fees are “taxes [or] shipping costs”). Thus,
5 any exception to the CLRA should be construed narrowly. See Harvey, 2025 WL 1359066, at *1;
6 Mansfield, 2025 WL 2811791, at *4.

7 Tyler argues that because DPR permits contractors to charge fees in exchange for services
8 performed, and because those fees must be approved by DPR’s Project Management Office (PMO),
9 the reservation fee is a “government-imposed fee.” (FACAC, Ex. A at 25.) (“The [website
10 interface] shall be capable of charging transaction fees in addition to the base cost of any purchase
11 through [it]. This may include transfer fees, cancellation fees, and reservation fees. Such fees shall 12 be set and implemented solely at the DPR PMO’s discretion.”). As exemplar fees under this 13 subsection, Tyler points to “airport use fees, hotel taxes, tourism board fees, wheelchair accessible
14 vehicle fees imposed on Lyft and Uber by the Public Utilities Commission.” (Mot. at 14.) Said
15 differently, Tyler points to fees collected by a private company but that are passed to and retained 16 by the government.

17 Here, by contrast, the complaint alleges that Tyler collects and retains those fees. (FACAC
18 ¶¶ 16, 104.) Contrary to Tyler’s claim, plaintiffs’ pleadings do not suggest that the reservation fees 19 were used to “help DPR pay for the cost of the public reservation system.” (Mot. at 14.) Whether 20 DPR set and ordered the reservation fee is a factual dispute that the Court will not resolve on a 21 motion to dismiss.<sup>4</sup> Thus, the Court finds that plaintiffs have adequately pleaded their CLRA claim.

22 Tyler’s motion to dismiss the CLRA claim is DENIED.

23

25

26 <sup>4</sup> Although Tyler advertises a “starting at” price rather than a “fixed” price, that difference
27 does not affect the Court’s analysis because a consumer could not reserve a campsite online for the 28 “starting at” price. (See Mot. at 13.) Under the Honest Pricing Act, a business must “include all mandatory fees” in the price it advertises for a good or service. Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a)(29)(A).

1                   C. THE UCL CLAIM AND FAL CLAIM

2                   Tyler claims that because the reservation fee is authorized by statute, the CLRA has created
3 a safe harbor that protects Tyler from plaintiffs' UCL and FAL claims.

4                   Where specific legislation provides a "safe harbor" by permitting certain conduct as 5 exempted from being unlawful, plaintiffs may not use the general unfair competition law to assault
6 that harbor. Cel-Tech Commc'ns., Inc. v. L.A. Cellular Tel. Co., 20 Cal.4th 163, 182 (1999).

7                   As noted above, a factual issue exists as to whether the reservation fee was imposed by 8 DPR. Accordingly, the application of a safe harbor fails at this juncture. The Court DENIES Tyler's
9 motion to dismiss the UCL and FAL claims on that basis.

10                  D. THE UNJUST ENRICHMENT CLAIM

11                  Finally, Tyler argues that plaintiffs fail to state a claim for unjust enrichment because there 12 is nothing unjust about paying a statutorily authorized cost-recovery fee for the convenience of 13 reserving a campsite in a state park.

14                  While "there is not a standalone cause of action for unjust enrichment, . . . a court may 15 'construe the cause of action as a quasi-contract claim seeking restitution,'" which describes "the 16 theory underlying a claim that a defendant has been unjustly conferred a benefit 'through mistake,
17 fraud, coercion, or request.'" Astiana v. Hain Celestial Grp., Inc., 783 F.3d 753, 762 (9th Cir. 2015)
18 (internal citations and quotations omitted). "The fact that one person benefits another is not, by 19 itself, sufficient to require restitution. The person receiving the benefit is required to make 20 restitution only if the circumstances are such that, as between the two individuals, it is unjust for the 21 person to retain it." First Nationwide Savings v. Perry, 11 Cal.App.4th 1657, 1663 (1992)
22 (emphasis in original); see also Astiana, 783 F.3d at 762; Doe v. Epic Games, 435 F.Supp.3d 1024, 23 1052 (2020).

24                  Here, as explained above, plaintiffs claim that had they known the true nature of the 25 reservation fee, they would have attempted to pay in person directly. (FACAC ¶¶ 89, 105.)
26 Plaintiffs' theory does not indicate that the fee was coerced, too high, or otherwise unjust to warrant
27 restitution. (Id. ¶¶ 5, 134.) As pleaded, plaintiffs do not allege that Tyler received a benefit through 28

1 "mistake, fraud, coercion, or request" to sustain a claim for unjust enrichment. See Astiana, 783
2 F.3d at 762.

3 Accordingly, Tyler's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' claim for unjust enrichment is GRANTED
4 without leave to amend. The Court concludes that any amendment would be futile because 5 plaintiffs take issue only with Tyler's advertising and do not claim that the fee itself is unjust.

6 IV. CONCLUSION

7 For the foregoing reasons, the Court the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART
8 Tyler's motion to dismiss. Tyler shall file an answer to the complaint within twenty-one days of 9 this order. The Court sets a case management conference for February 2, 2026 at 2:00 p.m. on the 10 Zoom platform.

11 This terminates Dkt. No. 19.
